BEEFED-UP HARD DRIVE FOR THE NEW SLIMLINE DVD RECORDER

Sharp Corporation of Australia released a new member of its DVD recorder series this month. The new DVHR350X has all the slimline style and technological capabilities of Sharp's inaugural DVD recorder, plus an amazing 120 GB hard disc and a new titanium look.

The DVHR350X has both style and savvy - featuring DVD recording, playback and storage while also providing a hard disk recording facility, DVD dubbing and MP3 decoder for playing CDs recorded in MP3 mode.

The 59mm-high unit is a must-have addition to any home entertainment area, and the sleek titanium hue matches Sharp's new G-Series LCDs and the new Z-Series Viewcams perfectly.

High speed dubbing, optional wide 16:9 viewing aspect, simultaneous recording and playback features as well as editing functions, are a few of the amazing features on the DVHR350X.

Utilise the special disc navigator function for instant thumbnail viewing of your favourite recorded programs on hard disc. Sharp has also ensured quality through its LSI jitter-free recording and four different recording modes; fine, LP, SP and EP.

Deputy Managing Director of Sharp Corporation of Australia, Denis Kerr, said Sharp has ensured no Olympic moments or epic movies will be missed thanks to the new hard disc.

"The 350X has 120Gb storage capacity, storing approximately 150 hours in EP, 100 hours in LP, 50 hours in SP and 30 hours in fine modes.

"The high speed dubbing function allows you to record a one-hour program in 30 minutes in fine mode, 15 minutes in SP, eight minutes in LP and five minutes in EP modes onto DVD.

"Once recordings are finalised, they can be used on most DVD players and DVD Rom drives, meaning entertainment can be taken anywhere and watched anytime, and cannot be accidentally recorded over. The DVHR350X is also re-writeable DVD compatible," Mr Kerr said.

The DVHR350X's audio capabilities include Dolby Digital output, MPEG audio, Spatializer sound, DTS and linear PCM audio.

The DVHR350X also has the ILink function, which not only allows you to connect your DV Camcorder, but the picture quality is second-to-none and the hard disc makes editing your precious memories much easier.

All of this Sharp performance comes in a portable slim-line design, which is only 59mm high and 5.1 kilograms in weight.
